Jack Lam named new city manager

City Council takes surprise action on R.C. post

By Lee Peterson

Rancho Cucamonga's City Council dropped a nationwide search for a new city manager Feb. 16 and promoted second-in-command Jack Lam.

The action at 1:15 a.m. surprised even Lam, who has been filling in as acting city manager since the council fired his predecessor two months ago.

"I am pleasantly surprised. I thought they would have conducted a recruitment," Lam said.

At the end of a six-hour council meeting, members secluded themselves for a brief discussion on Lam. Only minutes before they had taken final action to terminate former City Manager Lauren Wasserman.

When they emerged from closed session, council members unanimously directed City Attorney James Markman to enter negotiations with Lam to work out a contract for employment as city manager.

Lam, who said he expects the council will have a contract to ratify at its next meeting March 1, was congratulated on his promotion by council members and department heads after the long meeting adjourned.

The hiring puts to rest speculation that Lam's close association with the ousted Wasserman would jeopardize his chances for promotion.

Lam now has been given the helm of the city in one of its most turbulent periods in the last several years. The firing of Wasserman just a month after the November election touched off a bitter public debate over the council's decision. A recall committee formed to oust one of the council members.

"I think the only thing that I would say is that it certainly is a challenge. No one said the post would be easy," Lam said.

Lam was hired by Wasserman in June 1978 as the city's redevelopment chief. After 10 years as community development director, he became assistant city manager with the departure of Bob Rizzo in June 1988.

When Wasserman was fired and Lam was named acting city manager, Lam said he would be interested in vying for the city manager's job.

He expected he would have to direct his efforts through one of the eight private search firms the council was scheduled to

CHP smog patrol go after smoking vehicles in area

By Kimberly Heinrichs

Feb. 15 was not a good day to be smoking on the freeways of western San Bernardino County — or to be breaking any laws for that matter.

Those eight white smog patrol cars — bearing both the California Highway Patrol and South Coast Air Quality Management District logos — on local freeways were not just a polluting trucker's nightmare.

They also were a one-day program to bring attention to the 7-month-old patrol by cracking down on truckers where they drive — the Devore (15), San Bernardino (10) and Pomona (60) freeways.

"Today was a perfect day. It was clear, no wind. We were out there like white on rice," said Officer Greg Dettinger, normally assigned to the area. He and seven fellow officers — pulled from Los Angeles, Orange and Riverside counties — handed out 75 tickets before they wrapped up the effort at 2 p.m., he said.

Dettinger added that he would usually be able to hand out about five of those operating alone.

In addition, five regular patrol cars backed them up, Dettinger said.

"Seventy-seven percent of our pollution enforcement is diesel trucks, so obviously any place we have a lot of truck traffic we're going to have a lot of violations," said Sgt. George Johnson, who oversees the program funded by the air quality district.

"It does get the public's attention when they see a large number of marked cars in one place," he added.

The all-white cars carry the white-bird-on-blue logo of the air district as well as the characteristic light bars of the CHP.

The full-fledged patrol began in July with a budget of $725,000. It has not yet been approved for another year, Johnson said.

The western half of the county was selected because it is a major access route to Southern California with a major truck stop area off Milliken Avenue, as well as an area frequently traveled by dirt haulers, building suppliers and others contributing to the booming local construction, said CHP spokeswoman Vivian Firlein.

Although this was the first time all eight officers got together, three teamed up last month in the Los Angeles Harbor area, and all eight plan to gather in Newhall later this month for a similar effort, Johnson said.

He hopes to continue it once or twice a month in areas with a high concentration of both truckers and pollution.

"In the South Coast district we have 13,600 square miles and only eight of us," he said. "We want them to know we're out here."

Separate facility opens for county disturbed youth

By Richard Peraza

SAN BERNARDINO — Beginning Feb. 15 no child in San Bernardino County's psychiatric ward need worry about spending the night in the same room as adult patients.

The pomp and ceremony of official dedication completed Feb. 14, eight children, who were in the county medical center's Ward B psychiatric unit, were have to been moved into new quarters Feb. 15, according to Director of Mental Health Robert Martinez.

"Today is an outstanding day for the children of this county. For once, we will have a facility to care for the extremely emotionally disturbed child," Adrienne Gaines, executive director of the First Fund of Children's Resources, said Feb. 15.

Building the eight-bed Children's Acute Care Center adjoining the old Ward B in San Bernardino required a partnership between the county and local businesses.

The $666,000 that Martinez's department freed for construction included no funds for paint, furniture, equipment or landscaping. So the First Fund, working with the Baldy View Chapter of the Building Industry Association, lined up about 44 donors who chipped in more than $75,000 in materials, labor and cash to complete the project.

Opening the center ends years of headaches for Martinez, all brought on because the county had only one psychiatric unit.

The 56-bed wing, built in the mid-1970s, had to be shared by mentally disturbed senior citizens, children and adults.

consider at its Wednesday night-Thursday morning meeting. The estimates of the costs of those services ranged from $8,500 to $19,000.

"When you have one of the best around, there's no need wasting taxpayer's money looking around for someone else," said Mayor Dennis L. Stout, who had voted to fire Wasserman.

"Everybody had a lot of faith in him. We had the opportunity to examine his work for 10 years," Stout said. "He's done an excellent job as acting city manager through a trying time."

Councilman Bill Alexander, who had supported Wasserman, said he was shocked at the council's unanimous decision.

"I was very, very surprised. ... A very good decision was reached, a lot of money was saved," Alexander said.

Alexander said the appointment of Lam will heal many of the wounds caused by recent events.

Lam said he has a leg up on city manager candidates from the outside because he already works for the city.

"I have been fortunate that over the last 10 years I have been involved in almost every phase of operation of the city," Lam said.

Lam was reluctant to compare himself to his former boss.

"There obviously will be some certain differences in management styles," Lam said.

But he also pledged to stay the course on "all the excellent programs we have in place."

"It's an exciting opportunity for me. I have an affection for the city," said Lam. "I always thought this was the best community and we have a fine professional staff."

Before his employment in Rancho Cucamonga, Lam was community development director for the city of Lompoc, on the central California coast.

He has a bachelor's degree from UC Berkeley and a master's from San Francisco State. Lam was born in Hong Kong, but was raised in the small town of Firebough in the San Joaquin Valley.

He and his wife Linda have two children and live in Rancho Cucamonga.

Bader gives support to school bond

Assemblyman Chuck Bader, R-Pomona, has endorsed a school bond for the Alta Loma School District's March 7 special election.

If passed, the measure would create a $9 million general obligation bond to pay for the permanent site of Victoria Groves elementary school. It would also finance another elementary school in north Alta Loma.

No money from the bond will go to the district's second junior high school, which was funded when the state school facilities bond passed in November.

Passage of the local bond would qualify the district for matching state funds. Based on district estimates, the cost of repaying the debt would average about $3 per month per homeowner.

The March 7 special election has also been called to fill an empty seat on the Alta Loma school board vacated by Barbara Herrera in October.

New buses ready for wheelchairs

By David Madsen

While a federal appeals court ruling on Feb. 13 could force transit authorities in other parts of the country to equip new buses with wheelchair lifts, California already has required local transit operators to do so for 12 years.

Since 1976, 90 percent of the 2,469 buses operated by the Southern California Rapid Transit District have become wheelchair accessible, said RTD spokesman Rick Jagger.

"We have 450 new buses coming in that have wheelchair lifts and we should become 100 percent (equipped) in another year or two, as other older coaches are replaced," said Jagger.

When the state first mandated that new buses be lift equipped, there were few manufacturers of wheelchair lifts, he said.

"We have made great strides in wheelchair access since then," Jagger added.

Omnitrans, which operates a fleet of 75 buses in San Bernardino County, has 41 buses that offer lift-equipped service.

"We currently have bids out for 19 new buses to replace our older non-lift equipped buses," said Eileen Monaghan, Omnitrans marketing director.

The transit authority also provides two jump seats on its buses, that can be pushed up to provide a place for wheel chairs, or flipped down to provide regular seats.

R.C. voters to decide fate of fireworks

By Lee Peterson

The Rancho Cucamonga City Council bowed out of the fireworks debate Feb. 16 when it voted to place a binding fireworks ban on the November ballot.

The council acted at the urging of the Foothill Fire Protection District, whose directors had called for the council to enact a ban before this Fourth of July.

"This is the type of ordinance, if the people don't support it, it will fail," said Mayor Dennis L. Stout.

Five community groups earned nearly $100,000 in net profits in 1988 sales of "safe and sane" fireworks.

The Rancho Cucamonga Rotary Club alone made $25,000 at their booth.

Councilman Charles Buquet voted against placing the issue on the ballot. He said it should be referred first to the advisory commission for more study and input.

Stout countered that putting it on the ballot is the ultimate form of community input. "Referring it to them (the advisory commission) doesn't give me any new information," Stout said.

Foothill Chief Dennis Michael said his department is stretched to the limit by growth in the city, but when July 4 rolls around his forces are dangerously thin.

Foothill board of directors President Kevin Eggleston noted that the council a few months prior had voted to ban the use of plastic-foam made with an ozone-damaging chemical.

"Here we have a tangible danger, a clear and present danger from fireworks," Eggleston said. "It's not a question of if, it's only a question of when we will have a serious fire."

The district had hoped the council would enact a ban on the sale of "safe and sane" fireworks before the Independence Day holiday this year.

"It wasn't the course I would have liked to see them take. I would have have liked an outright ban," Eggleston said. "But I've always been ready to see it placed on the ballot."

Councilman Bill Alexander said he does not support fireworks, but he also could not support a council-imposed ban on the use and sale of fireworks. The city has more control with the current situation, he said.

However, Alexander said he was delighted to see the issue placed on a general ballot.

A citywide survey last year showed that only 30 percent of Rancho Cucamongans felt it was "important" to allow the continued use and sale of fireworks.

The council never before has sent a proposed fireworks ban to the ballot.

Some of the adults were violent and facing criminal charges.

It was a situation nobody liked, Martinez said. It drew harsh criticism from the county grand jury, state review teams, state licensing agencies and the county Mental Health Advisory Board.

"The (mental health) department had some concern, but we had no other place to put them (children)," Martinez said.

As the county's growing population steered more children into the old ward, the issue grew hotter and "I knew I was going to have to do this (build a new center) so I started saving some money" from the department budget, Martinez said.

About 1½ years ago he had scraped together $666,000 in state program money but couldn't use it for construction purposes. Obtaining the Board of Supervisors' blessing, Martinez spent months getting the state Legislature's permission to build a children's center with the leftover funds, then ushered the plans through state architectural agencies in about eight weeks.

"That was almost unheard of," he said. "People would shake their heads and say a process like that takes six to eight months, sometimes a year."

The center is designed to look more like home than a hospital.

Painted in pastels with matching furnishings and bedspreads, it's liberally sprinkled with colorful art and potted plants.

The center boasts four bedrooms with two beds each, a laundry room, two television sets, a videocassete recorder, a seclusion room for patients that must be isolated, a combination dining room and day room and a combination kitchen and occupational therapy room.

Virtually all the supplies — from television, refrigerator and stove to craft materials, tools and movie projectors — were supplied by donors, according to supervising occupational therapist Christine O'Hagan.

They are not frills, she said, explaining that crafts, cooking and entertainment are important in building a mentally disturbed child's social skills, self-esteem and self-control.

But swelling demand could burst the walls, she said. "This thing will be full all the time. I'm not putting it down, we're lucky to have it."

Martinez said the center would have been bigger if more money had been available. He said there were 12 children in Ward B during the weekend and, "I'll bet we could use a 20-bed facility, easily."

Despite an overflow potential, he vowed not to place children in the old ward again.

Haven Avenue extension to begin in July

By David Madsen

A $21.5 million project to extend Haven Avenue in Ontario between the San Bernardino (10) and Pomona (60) freeways is expected to get under way in July.

The project will connect Haven from Jurupa Street to Mission Boulevard, and widen the avenue to six and eight lanes, said Mike Curtin, project coordinator for the city of Ontario.

Plans also call for the construction of an interchange at Haven and the Pomona Freeway, said Curtin.

The project will be financed through the creation of an assessment district in the area.

"Right now the area is abandoned vineyards and some working vineyards. There are plans for the construction of commercial development," said Curtin.

The commercial development is expected to provide Ontario with a major tax base, increased land values and numerous new jobs, Curtin said.

Because the northern portion of Haven from Jurupa Street to Airport Drive passes through the east end of Ontario International Airport, the city of Los Angeles will provide $2.5 million in construction funds.

The airport is owned and managed by the Los Angeles Department of Airports.

The department also will maintain landscaping and irrigation within that portion of the avenue in the airport boundaries.

Along with becoming a major north-south avenue, Haven also will provide a direct route from either freeway to the airport, Curtin said.

Grandparents can learn all about bringing up baby

By Paula Monarez

When Mary Michael first became a mom, cloth diapers were a must and baby bottles were always sterilized.

That was in the 1950s. Today as a grandmother, Michael has discovered that diapers are now disposable and boiling bottles is a no-no.

She and her husband, Bob Michael, didn't learn this by reading books or magazines.

No, the West Covina couple went back to a school of sorts to learn the ins-and-outs of bringing up baby in the 1980s.

The class, called the Grandparent Connection, is a two-hour course offered at Pomona Valley Hospital Medical Center.

"It was our daughter-in-law who told us about the class," said Mary Michael. "At first we didn't think we needed a class on how to be grandparents, but we decided to take it anyway. I'm glad we did because it reminded us of some things we had forgotten. And we found out there had been some changes."

Across the country, many hospitals are beginning to offer courses up-dating older Americans on child-rearing.

The hope is that the class will help develop a secure system between grandparents, parents, siblings and newborns and also help bridge the communication gap, said Ethel Paxson, a nurse who teaches the grandparenting class at Pomona.

"You can't teach someone to be a grandparent," said Paxson, who is a grandmother herself. "But you can inform them of all the new things that are happening in parenting."

During the course, grandparents learn about changes in birthing during the last 20 years, family involvement in the birth experience, how to "childproof" the home, CPR and poison control techniques and educational programs for new parents and their families.

"What we usually do is sit around and talk about grandparenting," Paxson said. "I answer any questions they might have. We want to show them what it's all about."

The group is also given a tour of the hospital and shown how the obstetric equipment operates, Paxson said.

Classes are held for a couple of hours every two months.

"Most people who take the class are working grandparents," Paxson said. "They want to know what their children are talking about while they are raising their grandchildren."

Many are very surprised at the changes.

"My husband wasn't even allowed in the delivery room when I had mine," said Kathy Verburg, a 50-year-old grandmother who took the class a year ago. "I think it would have been neat to have kids the way they have them now."

Although only a few hospitals currently offer grandparenting classes, programs for educating the elderly soon will be implemented nationwide, according to Robert Strom, professor with the division of psychology in education at Arizona State University.

"Older Americans are the fastest growing population in the country and the least informed population," Strom said. "They need to be educated about what's going on today so they came remain viable members of the family. They need to better understand the changing family roles."

According to Strom, 50 million Americans have earned the title of grandparents.

"For many this is their last role in life," Strom said. "We need to show them ways of preserving and improving it."

Last year, Strom received a grant from the American Association of Retired Persons to study 800 grandparents, their children and grandchildren. The group spends a few hours once a month learning about one another and their changing roles.

He hopes to take the program and offer it to grandparents across the country.

"It'll be a training program showing people how to become better grandparents," Strom said. "This is a natural step in our society. Older people have a great deal to offer. But they can't do it if they're out of date."

While only Pomona Valley Hospital offers a grandparent class locally, other hospitals are considering adding the course.

"I think a grandparenting class would be very crucial to any program," said Pam Palmer, a nurse who teaches a birth class at Kaiser Permanente Medical Center in Fontana. "And I think it will be added in the near future. In the meantime, I would not discourage any grandparents from coming to Birth of a Family class."

For Mary and Bob Michael, the grandparenting class was an eye-opener.

Barbara Ryan to fill school board seat

By Natalie Shore

Trustees of the Upland Unified School District unanimously named Barbara Ryan to fill a board vacancy recently.

The appointment gives the City of Upland an amicable taste of its own medicine, trustees noted.

Ryan, a planning commissioner, will replace Donna Vandersall, who left the school board for an appointed position on the Upland City Council.

"They did that to us," said trustee Michael Varela after the vote.

Trustees reached their decision after half-hour interviews with each of the seven applicants. The entire meeting was conducted in open session.

During her interview, Ryan repeated earlier comments that, if appointed, she would not hesitate to resign her planning commission post to avoid any possible conflict of interest with her school board duties.

City Attorney Don Maroney found a potential conflict if the same person were to hold both positions.

"My heart has always been in the schools," Ryan told board members.

Ryan also agreed to forfeit her paid position as an instructional aide at Pioneer Junior High in order to sit on the school board.

Responding to the same questions asked of all seven candidates, Ryan cited her PTA and civic involvement and campaign efforts contributing to the district's 1986 unification among her qualifications for the board position.

Each applicant also was asked what priorities or special interests he would bring to the board.

"To maintain and continue to improve the level of excellence in the instructional program, that is my first priority," Ryan said.

During her interview, Ryan also expressed concern about the impact of growth on Upland schools and the need to work with parents as their children move from junior high to Upland High School. First-time high school parents may need to be assured, Ryan said.

"Upland High has an image - problem it doesn't deserve," she said.

Ryan was to be sworn in Feb. 14 at the board's next regular meeting, said President Joseph Lenz. If Ryan's appointment is not contested, she will assume full governing duties 30 days later, he said.

Due the unification process, all five seats will be up from re-election in November. Ryan, along with the other candidates, stated her intent to run in November, if named as the newly appointed board member.

Only one applicant, attorney Brian Brandt, stated his intent to run in November regardless of the recent outcome.
